Dating back to 1922, Redex has a colourful and fascinating history. Not least that Redex was added to the fuel of World War 2 planes to keep them flying for longer. These planes were marked with a characteristic red X to give pilots extra confidence before flying. A shot of Redex was also given at petrol stations as a quick and easy addition to the fuel tank to improve engine performance.

Over the years, Redex has remained at the forefront of engine technology and has also responded innovatively to today's need for more convenient packaging.
